WHAT CAN THE RETIRED OFFICERS DIVISION DO FOR YOU?

For a modest annual subscription retired public sector employees can continue to be directly involved with CPSU and receive its services and benefits.

Membership of the ROD is open to all Victorian public sector retirees and their spouses/partners.

The ROD have a membership of about 400 and with this combined strength retired officers are involved in:

- Lobbying the State and Federal Governments to maintain and improve benefits for retired public sector employees. Superannuation, taxation and social services are just some of the issues the ROD tackle governments about.
- Contributing to the running of the union.
- Running regular ROD meetings with guest speakers on relevant topics such as: superannuation, health, social security, financial planning and taxation.
- Producing notices and newsletters for members.

Can I join?

ROD membership is open to all retired Victorian public sector employees who were members of CPSU at their time of retirement. Membership also includes the participation of a spouse or partner.

CPSU federally is one of the largest unions in Australia with membership of about 200,000. CPSU brings together state branches of the State Public Services Federation representing state government employees, and the Public Sector Union (of Commonwealth Government employees).
